

THE STATE KREMLIN PALACE

Come Perform in the Largest, Most Prestigious Concert Hall in Russia!

Built in 1961, Moscow's State Kremlin Palace Theater—originally The Palace of Congresses—was once touted as "a model for modern urban Soviet architecture." Used for diplomatic, governmental, and Communist Party gatherings, it remains the only distinctively modern building in the historic Kremlin.

With changes in government have come changes in use: serving as a second stage for the Bolshoi as well as for other arts groups, the Kremlin Palace Theater has become Moscow's largest, best equipped, and most prestigious concert hall. Indeed, the vast auditorium can seat up to 6,000 people, making it the largest concert hall in all of Russia.

Though our concert tour, "Merging Musical Worlds," culminates with a performance in Moscow's largest theater, the tour begins in the historic and elegant city of St. Petersburg, with much sightseeing and additional performances along the way. Come give witness to your faith, your American spirit, your love of music, and your respect for the people, culture, and history of Russia: join our concert tour, "Merging Musical Worlds."

You will be joining a 300-voice Russian/American choir and a 75-piece orchestra—featuring some of the world's finest musicians—in St. Petersburg and in Moscow's State Kremlin Palace.

Do not miss this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to celebrate the enduring faith and heritage of two great nations!
